

Flame of Denial

You kneel before my throne that is born of your lies

You believe that i'm a godsend, the chosen one, a miracle

You believe that i'll live a life of wealth, love and luxury

And you made me believe that this will all come into fruition

Your words sparked a flame of hope in my soul

The same fire in your eyes when you'd determined my destiny

My flame began to rage and soon after lost control

And that's when I decided to vivify this legacy

So I walked through life with my head held high

Believing that my limit was beyond that of the sky

But the disillusioning reality has opened my eyes

The man in the mirror is not a god, but a fool in disguise

I amounted to nothing, no matter how much I persisted

But you still held on, your flame burned bright in your soul

It grew stronger and stronger, yet it seemed weak and hollow

As it was no longer fueled by hope, but by denial

You refused to believe that this is all I could amount to

The world's snuffed out my flame, i've accepted my fate

But yours raged like wildfire, fumes clouding your vision

So you could never see me for who I truly am

And never face the truth of the fool standing in front of you

Why can't you let this daydream dissipate?

Why must you persist that there is still hope?

In the soul of a boy who has been plunged into despair

The only way to reach contentment is to accept and cope

Stop letting your flame of denial burn brighter

Let believing in me be your last mistake

I can't stand watching your spirit burn in the fire

Will you let me go, for Christ's sake?

Why must you hold onto that stupid dream?

Your inferno is causing your whole world to blacken

I beg of you, can you do this one thing for me, please!

Will you take that phony dream and burn it before something happens?